

About us.

The Royal Engineers Bomb Disposal, EOD and Search History Group, is set up and run by those who served in the Units and Supported by others from the same background.

We receive financial support only from donations. Our time spent on this is willingly and freely given.

Our Aim.

The aim of the group is to in as open, comprehensive and accurately as possible piece together the history of these activities taken on by the Corps of Royal Engineers from 1940 and a role that they continue in today.

Therefore, preserving our history in a central location, for all to freely access.

This is to ensure that our history has a home and is not lost to time.

To give a resource that any interested party can search for details and share information that they have for the benefit of all.

How do we achieve this.

We search archives, the internet, books and other publications and tie together threads from the varying sources and build sections on the site, where the information is shared in an easily navigable format.

Two main pieces of work have taken twenty years to come together for families, researchers and others to find details of those who went before us and to identify those who received Honours and Awards. This work was initially started by the Royal Engineers Association Bomb Disposal Branch.

These documents are.

1. The Roll of Honour, in 4 Volumes covering all those who died in service either in action, from their wounds, through illness or accidents and those who took their own lives.

This is not just a list of names as you will see.

We will Remember them.

2. Honours and Awards showing who was awarded what, and in most cases a transcription of their citations.

As you can see on the Home Page general titled sections, as you search these you will find more specific sections covering a wide range of subjects.
